Honorable John V. Tunney
United States Senate
Washington, D. C. 20510

Dear Senator Tunney:

Enclosed is a copy of "Where's What," as requested in your letter of 21 April 1975.

Please note that the publication is classified "CONFIDENTIAL." A number of contributors in the past have requested that the publication remain classified as it contains material which they feel requires protection. CIA itself has no objection to the aspects involving CIA, and we are again determining if the contributors have changed their position. In the meantime, we would appreciate your not using any information in this publication in an unclassified or public manner without contacting Mr. George L. Cary, my Legislative Counsel, in order that he may seek appropriate approval.

In utilizing "Where's What," it should be kept in mind that the book was prepared by an investigator for Federal investigators while the author held a federal executive fellowship at the Brookings Institution. It merely catalogues and describes sources for types of information which might be required by such investigators. The book emphasizes where information may be found rather than availability. Need and access would depend upon the purpose of the investigation, the cooperation of the sources contacted (particularly in the private sector) and the authority of the investigator to make the type of investigation involved. The Report of the Commission on CIA Activities Within the United States, recently issued, deals with this subject as it affects CIA and notes that, "The Agency's own recent actions, undertaken in the most part in 1973 and 1974 have gone far to terminate the activities upon which this investigation has focused."

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~

thus, I wish to make clear that the fact that this book was written by a CIA employee should not imply broad usage by CIA of the sources indicated. CIA will conduct only those investigations properly within its legal authorities.

Sincerely,

/s/ W. E. Colby
